Intermatic timer not working

I have an issue with a T104 Intermatic Timer that the dial will not keep time, thus it will never turn on or off the pool pump. The motor is working I can see it turning through the peep hole. The pump turns on and off manually just fine.. I also replaced the timer using a brand new unit (all the guts).. The old unit did have some bad gears that seemed to be lock-up. But I could see the motor turning on that unit as well.. I'm stumped.. I have a booster pump Intermatic Timer T104 next to this one and it works fine.. Looks like its coming from the same power feed. Just moved into this house, so from my standpoint its never worked.. not sure what or if the previous owners did anything with the wiring. Any ideas would be a huge help!!! Thanks Hello and welcome to TFP! While I'm not a certified electrician, we do have many here at TFP who may reply. You sound like a fairly capable DIY'er who is familiar with these T104s. I suspect you've ruled-out any manual by-pass or override issues with the timer which leads you to believe it may be strictly a wiring concern. They are fairly straight-forward, but once in a while we do see some unusual wiring scenarios. In past cases, a good pic or two have helped the experts to evaluate the issue. Any chance you can post a pic or two of the wiring in question? Since you are a new member, your photo upload capability may be limited. So here's a couple ideas to help. Have you tried linking your photos from Photobucket? That's what many of us do here on TFP. Upload your pics to Photobucket (free), then copy & paste the IMG code for that pic from Photobucket to your TFP post. Works great. Also, you can try going to the bottom of your quick reply post where it says "Go Advanced", and then down to where it says "Manage Attachments". It may let you upload them that way. They may show-up large because you can't adjust the size of the attachment, but it may work. Hopefully we can help you get this resolved as soon as possible. Have a nice day. The pump works in the bypass mode correct? If that is true I would take out the guts again and inspect for anything that may be causing the problem. If you can see something obvious then fix it. Now that you have it out take it back to Home Depot or wherever and exchange it for another one and see if that works. If its working in bypass then there is probably something wrong right out of the box and you should just exchange it. Sounds like your dial has lost its spring, or you have one or more stripped gears. For ease, lets number the gears in these pictures. 1 being the largest, down to 4 the smallest. Were just looking at the gears on this side of the mounting plate. Can you rotate the yellow clock wheel without having to pull it out? If so, this would suggest a broken or missing spring, or stripped gear 1 or 3. The spring keeps the clock wheel engaged to gear 3. You can see the spring between the clock wheel, and the current time pointer(silver). I have pulled the clock wheel out in this picture like you would to set the correct time. You can see how this disengages gear 1 from 3 to set the time. Gear 4 comes with the new timer motor and sticks through the mounting plate and engages gear 2. If you just replaced the timer motor, gear 4 is probably ok. Im thinking if it is a stripped gear, it's either going to be gear 1 or 2, maybe 3. But 3 is a thicker, stronger gear. If gear 3 has failed, you will be able to see a pronounced groove in it. Hello. I have the same problem. The timer motor is working but the dial is not turning. Except in my case when its manually turned on, the dial turns!!! © 1996-2014. Amazon.com, Inc. or its affiliates Intermatic timers are common among pool owners and typically last a long time, but they also can come with problems and may need to be fixed. Intermatic timers can typically be fixed by checking there's power to the timer, resetting the time, renewing the ON/OFF trippers and renewing the gears or timer motor. Most Intermatic timer parts can be renewed but sometimes you need to replace the whole mechanism. Common timer problems include the clock not turning, not switching the pump on/off, loose timer pointer and a stopped clock. In this article, we'll cover what problems you may find with your Intermatic timer and how you can fix it without having to run to the store. We cover T101, T103 and T104 models of mechanical pool timers. You can also apply some of the troubleshooting steps to other brand timers. Intermatic Timers T101, T103, T104 Most Common Intermatic Timer Problems 1. Timer Clock Not Turning The clock not turning on your Intermatic pool timer is a common issue. If the timer clock is not turning on your pool pump timer, it's either the timer itself has a fault or there's no power to the timer. Jump to the troubleshooting steps below to fix the issue. 2. Timer Not Switching Pump On/Off Sometimes you will find the timer appears to be working, that is the clock dial is turning and you can see the gears behind the clock turning, but the pump isn't being switched on or off. In this case it's likely the On/Off trippers, loose wiring, the clock face not being located correctly or a faulty pump. Jump to the troubleshooting steps below to fix the issue. 3. Clock Loses Time or Time Incorrect If the pool timer is not keeping the correct time or losing time, there may be a simple fix. Did the power recently go out or has the circuit breaker tripped? If there has been a recent power outage, the clock will have stopped and you'll need to reset the clock to the correct time. Other problems causing this could be the yellow clock dial isn't located correctly, wiring is loose, the gears are stripped, damaged or partially jammed or even the clock motor. Jump to the troubleshooting steps below to fix the issue. 4. Timer Switching On/Off at the Wrong Times A timer that switches on and off at the wrong times usually occurs after a power outage. When the power goes out, the timer stops. Reset the clock on the timer to the correct time to get it back to the desired on/off times. If the clock was already showing the correct time, check the On/Off Trippers (Pointers) are set to the correct time and are not loose. If the trippers are loose, then they could slip and cause issues with the pump turning on/off at the correct times. Tighten them with a wrench. When the trippers are done up, you shouldn't be able to move them with your hands. The trippers can also get damaged. Take them off and inspect them and look for twists in them. Replace them if they appear to be bent. 5. Middle Time Pointer Moves / Loose You may notice that the time pointer is loose or is moving around too much.If you find your pointer is loose, simply tighten the screw that holds the timer in place so that it doesn't wiggle around. 6. Trippers (On/Off Pointers) Moving Much like your timer pointer, the trippers can become loose and move around as well. It is a good idea to use pliers or a wrench and reset the trippers, then tighten them at the desired on/off times. 7. Manual On/Off Switch is Tight or Stuck Sometimes the on/off switch on Intermatic and other mechanical timers can get tight. Give it a little squirt of WD-40 or similar lubricant. Now try to jiggle it on and off. It should loosen up after a few goes when the grease and gunt dissolve. 8. Timer Won't Manually Switch Pump On You should always be able to switch your pump on and off manually at the timer. If you can't, is the manual switch stuck or jammed? See the point above if it is. If the timer manual switch isn't jammed and freely moves into the "On" and "Off" positions, then there is either no power to the timer, the timer itself has a fault, there is an issue with the wiring or the pool pump is faulty. Jump to the troubleshooting steps below to fix the issue. 9. Timer Stopped After Power Outage A recent power outage will cause the timer to stop working. But if the timer doesn't come back on after a storm, there could be an issue. A power surge may have taken out the timer or the pump. Jump to the troubleshooting steps below to fix the issue. Reasons Why Pool Timers Stop Working 1. No Power to the Timer Having no power to your pool timer is a common problem and will occur because of three reasons: The Circuit Breaker has tripped.There's an issue with the wiring between the circuit breaker and the timer.The terminals on the wires aren't tight. The first and easiest thing to check is the circuit breaker. Your pool timer and pump will be on its own circuit and have a dedicated circuit breaker or GFCI (ground fault interrupter). Also known as an RCD (residual current device) in Australia and the UK. You can find this in your power board. make sure it hasn't tripped and is switched on. 2. Gears Stripped or Damaged The gears in mechanical timers can get damaged. Sometimes bugs get in there and jam the gears, sometimes debris is the issue and other times the gears get old and may lose a tooth. If any of these issues occur your timer will not work properly. To check this, carefully inspect the gears for missing teeth and make sure they all freely turn. Clean the gears with a toothbrush if you see debris or gunk in them. 3. Yellow Clock Wheel Not Located Correctly Yet another reason why timers don't work properly is the yellow clock wheel is not located or seated properly. To check this, try to pull out the clock dial and then move it to the correct time and press it back down again. It should sit down nicely. If it doesn't, there could be an issue with the clock face or gears. You can replace the entire mechanism or the gears. 4. On/Off Trippers or Pointers Loose or Damaged On occasion the timer is the issue but it turns out it's really the pump or the wiring between the pump and the timer. If there is power going to the timer and the timer appears to be working but the pump isn't turning on and off, then you'll need to check the pump. This is hard to check if you are not qualified. A qualified person would check there is power to the timer and then bypass the timer to see if the pump worked. How to Troubleshoot and Pool Timer (Intermatic or mechanical timer) Back when I was a young technician I was taught to always look for the easy things and use all my senses. For example, sometimes you can see a burnt wire or sometimes it may be as simple as the circuit breaker has been tripped. It's hard to give a fixed order for the steps you should take as it depends on what you found in the previous steps. Basically you're eliminating possibilities until you find the cause. There's really only 3 causes as to why your pump won't turn on/off. They are: No Power to the Timer or Power Board Faulty Pump or Wiring from the Timer to the Pump Here's how to troubleshoot a mechanical pool timer step-by-step: Check for Power to the Timer. It goes without saying that you should be qualified if you intend on working with live power. Electricity is dangerous and can kill you if you don't know what you're doing. First you want to make sure there is actually power getting from the power board to the timer itself. 1. Use the Manual Switch to Turn the Pump On/Off This is the first step to confirm if there is power or not. Turn the manual on/off switch. If the pump comes on, you definitely have power to the timer. Proceed to step 4 to check the timer itself. If the pump doesn't come on, follow the steps below. 2. Check the circuit breaker (GFCI) hasn't tripped. Flip it back to "ON" if it has. Sometimes the circuit breaker will trip again as soon as you reset it or even trip when the pump starts running. We have a comprehensive article that covers what to do when the pump circuit breaker continually trips. 3. Measure the Voltage at the Timer Input You need extreme care in this next step. You will have live wires exposed and they can kill you if you touch them. Only perform this step if you are qualified. Switch the breaker off at the power board. Now remove the terminal cover on the timer. After this has been removed, you can turn the breaker back on and measure for the voltage on the timer input. It should be 110V or 220V AC. If you don't have the voltage here you have an issue with either the wiring or the breaker. If I have to tell you which terminals to measure, you shouldn't be doing this! If you do have voltage either the timer isn't switching the power to the pump or there's an issue with the pump itself or the wiring between the pump and the timer. Power to the Timer But Timer Not Working or Not Working Properly If after verifying you have power to the timer, then check these things to further troubleshoot. 4. Check if the Timer Clock is Set to the Correct Time Start with the easy checks. Look to see if the clock is set to the correct time. If it's not, then the timer will not turn on/off at the correct times. Reset the clock to the correct time. 5. Tighten the Main Middle Time Pointer Make sure the middle time pointer is tight. If it's loose, grab a screwdriver and tighten it up. 6. Verify the Yellow Clock Face is Located Correctly The yellow clock face should sit down in the timer. If it's not, it won't work properly. Grab it, pull it towards you, move it around then place it back down. 7. Check the Trippers Are Set to the Correct On/Off Times Sometimes the trippers get loose or damaged. Take them off and inspect them. They should be straight, if not, replace them. Put them back on and tighten them. 8. Verify if the Gears Are Turning Just above the yellow clock you'll see some holes. Grab your torch and shine it in the holes. You should be able to see the gears moving. If they are not moving then you have an issue. With the power switched off at the breaker, take out the main part of the timer and carefully inspect the gears for obstructions and missing teeth. It only takes a small amount of dirt to foul up gears so look carefully. Replace the gears if this is an issue. If you can't see an issue with the gears, then it could be the timer motor. You can replace it but it's really just easier to replace the entire mechanism. If you don't think the mechanism is the issue, move onto the next step. 9. Get a New Intermatic Timer If none of the above suggestions resolves your issues or the issues continue to persist, it may be a good idea to purchase a new Intermatic timer for your pump. Sometimes it's way quick just to replace it rather than spend hours troubleshooting. We recommend these Intermatic timers for most pools:Intermatic T101 Intermatic T103Intermatic T104Intermatic T103 Mechanical Time Switch If you're not sure which is the best timer for your pool to get, we have a full blogpost for which Intermatic timer you should get for your pool. Final Thoughts Intermatic timers are a great addition to your pool set up but they can go wrong. If you've followed this guide or aren't confident in diagnosing the issue yourself, seek a qualified pool technician or electrician.
